VERDICT OF CORONER'S JURY

The Slayer of Clarence L. Snyder

REMARKABLE SITUATION

Will."

Witness said that the man who did the shooting from Flemming's yard raised the gun each time on a level and seemed to take deliberate aim. He could see him plainly. Nothing but constalks were between them and these were not sufficient to obstruct the view. Asked if he could have seen a hawk if it had been near him, he answered in the affirmative. killing occurred, with the murder. The verdict is as follows:

regilet is as follows:

"We find that the said C. L. Snyder came to his death on November 16th, 1899, in Princess Anne county, Virginia, by a wound caused by a rifle ball fired at the said C. L. Snyder from a rifle in the hands of O. I. Flemming, and that said O. I. Flemming did feloniously and of his malice aforethought kill and murder the said C. L. Snyder.

At Huntersville yesterday, where the coroner's inquest was held severe criticism of Justice Pritchard, the magistrate who allowed Flemming to give bond, was on the lips of everyone. Some even went so far as to say that Justice Pritchard's commission should be revoked for committing so gross a violation of the law.

Justice G. S. Ferguson, who sat with Justice Pritchard in the preliminary examination of Flemming at Kempsville Friday afternoon, took occasion, while on the witness stand in the inquest proceedings yesterday, to explain that he only sat in the case by courtesy, and had no decision in the matter. He sald he would not have bailed Magistrate Flemming, as the case was clearly not a ballable one.

Justice Hawks characterized Justice formal application to Judge B. D. White, of the Princess Anne County Court, for a special session of the grand Jury of that county this week to consider a bill of indictment against Flemming for murder. Judge White said to a Virginian-Pilot reporter yesterday afternoon that he did not think he would call a special grand Jury, as there will be a regular jury in January. Commonwealth's Attorney Ackiss is said to be in favor of a special grand jury.

THE CORONER INQUEST.

THE CORONER INQUEST.

When the jury of inquest reconvened yesterday afternoon in Justice Hawks court room at Huntersville, Sydney J. Summers, the young man who was with Snyder when he was killed, resumed his testimony where he left off yesterday afternoon. He said that when he and Mr. John Snyder drove to Kempsville after the dead boy's body. Flemming said to the latter: "If you want to find out who did it get out a warrant and have the matter investigated. I know nothing about it. I was shooting at some hawks to-day." John Snyder picked up the gun that his brother had been using to show Flemming that it was not loaded, and that his brother had not been hunting on his farm, but was simply walking across it. As he did so Flemming drew a pistol from his pocket and, levelling it at Snyder, said: "I have not killed any one, but I will."

Witness said that the man who did

Flemming said: "I haven't killed anyone, but I will." Witness then said:
"If I knew you killed my brother I would shoot you down in your tracks."

A MAGISTRATE TESTIFIES. A MAGISTRATE TESTIFIES.

Justice G. S. Ferguson testified as to arresting Fleming upon hearing from Sheriff Cromwell, of Norfolk county, that he had killed a man. When Justice Ferguson arrested him he was in Grook's grocery, at Kempsville. Flemming said he had been told by a boy, Henry Cooper, that a hawk had pleked up a chicken in his (Fleming's) yard, and he had been shooting at the hawk down on a pine tree in his field. Justice Ferguson testified that he saw no pine tree in the direction of the shootthe Ferguson testified that he saw no pine tree in the direction of the shooting, but saw a cedar tree. There was nothing to obstruct the view between where Flemming stood and where young Snyder fell, save cornstalks and weeds. Flemming could have seen the hunters from where he stood.

SHOT ON A LEVEL. SHOT ON A LEVEL.

Dr. E. W. Baxter who made the examination of young Snyder's wound, testified that the bullet struck him on a level. It was sufficient to produce death. This was the last witness examined. The coroner's jury deliberated for a short while and returned the verdict as above given.

TALK WITH HIS BONDSMAN.

TALK WITH HIS BONDSMAN.

A Virginian-Pilot reporter called up Mr. Grook, Flemming's bendsmand, by 'phone last night about 11 o'clock, and asked him what Flemming had to say about the coroner's jury's verdiet. Mr. Grook did not care to talk on this subject, he said. Asked if he knew anything of Flemming's reported intention to skip out, and if he thought he had any such intention, his bondsman replied: "I hope not." He said that all was quiet in the neighborhood of Flemming's home. Commutation of Sentence

The fire at the Norfolk Silk Company's mill, near Lambert's Point, which yesterday's Virginian-Pilot briefly told of, consumed only a part of the building. The York street engine house force responded to the fire alarm which was turned in from the corner of Scott and Cumberland streets at 3 a. m., and finding that the fire was several miles outside of the city, Chief Ryan located it. He thenordered the fire several miles outside of the city, Chief Ryan located it. He then ordered the fire engine to proceed to the scene of the conflagration. It was about 3:30 clock before the firemen reached the mill, but they saved the rear part of the building, which contained the engine and the boiler rooms. The hose was connected with the water pipe at the Powhatan knitting mills near by.

The building was practically completed with the exception of the roof, which was partially constructed. There was considerable wood-work about the structure, and this was very nearly destroyed. Only the front wall, however, is so badly damaged that it will have to be torn down.

The loss is partly covered by insurance. The engines and boilers were in the basement, and the fire did not reach them. The valuable looms had not arrived, fortunately. The mill would have been put in operation by the first of next year, at least. The fire will, of course, delay this to some extent. The burned portion will be rapidly rebuilt, however. The mill will give employment to several hundred women and girls when put in operation.

The mill is owned principally by New Jersey capitalists. Mr. Barton Myers, of this city, is president, and he and Mr. Andrew Mottu are financially interested, Mr. Mottu being one of the stockholders. THE COST OF THE MILL.

THE COST OF THE MILL.

The Virginian-Pilot is advised by Mr. Barton Myers that it was in error in reporting him as saying the cost of the silk mill to date was 390,000.

The cost of the building and machinery when completed will be about $50,000, but at the time of the fire the building was not completed, and no machinery had been put in, excepting engine, boiler and pumps. These were in a portion of the building not reached by the fire.
